Curator’s Corner:

Welcome to the first “Curators Corner”!

I want to highlight the Jack Stewart papers this month. Meaghan is wrapping up the accessioning of the collection so it will available to researchers soon.

Who was Jack Stewart? Stewart was an Atlanta artists who ended up in the New York City art scene after World War II. He attracted noticed first as an Action Painter but then moved on to murals, designing furniture, and luminous paintings of the natural world.

Stewart is best known for his groundbreaking photographs of subway graffiti in New York City. Yes, an artist from Atlanta was the first to systematically document bubble-letter tags, 3-D letters, Wild Style, and whole-train bombs. 275 of his photographs were compiled in the book “Graffiti Kings: New York City Mass Transit Art of the 1970s.” There are approximately 900 other photographs in the collection that are unpublished.

In conjunction with the opening of the Stewart papers, the Rose Library is sponsoring two graffiti-related exhibits at the Atlanta Celebrates Photography Festival: Josephine Sacabo’s “Tagged” at EBD4 in Chamblee and “Lost Atlanta” at Blue Mark Studios on the Westside.

For more information, contact Randy Gue, Curator of Modern Political and Historical Collections, at randy.gue@emory.edu or 7-5046.
